Dr. Harleah Buck

Harleah Graham Buck, PhD, RN, FPCN, FAAN is Associate Professor of Nursing at the University of South Florida where she is also the Coordinator of Chronic Illness Initiatives.

Dr. Buck has over 30 years of nursing experience at multiple large health care systems. She is funded by both the National Institutes of Health and the National Science Foundation. Dr. Buck's research examines the influence of the interaction between older adults and their informal caregivers when self-managing chronic illness at home.

Dr. Buck's contributions to nursing have been acknowledged with multiple honors and awards as well as invitations to present on palliative care and chronic disease topics in national webinars and scientific sessions.

She is recipient of the 2017 Mathy Mezey Excellence in Aging Award by the American Heart

Association; honored as Best Cited Author by the European Journal of Cardiovascular Nursing for 'Caregivers' contributions to heart failure self-care: A systematic review'; and awarded by a juried panel the 2016 Journal of Continuing Education in Nursing Innovation Award for her rural health project infusing geriatric continuing education into Critical Access Hospitals.

She most recently co-chaired the American Nurses Association Palliative and Hospice Nursing Professional Issues Panel which issued a call for action for nursing to lead and transform palliative care.
